Like what?

- ◆ The right to express your own opinion
- ◆ The right to feel however you want
- ◆ The right to express your feelings in your own personal way
- ◆ The right to question anything you do not understand
- ◆ The right to refuse what you perceive to be unreasonable requests

What else?

- The right to at least ask for what you want
- The right to be irrational, illogical, inconsistent or unpredictable
- The right to make mistakes
- The right to make your own choices in life

More?

- ◆ The right to relate to whom you want, when you want, and how you want
- ◆ The right to defend yourself against attempts by others to limit or infringe on your rights

What about responsibilities?

- The first is the responsibility of owning your own feelings.
- For instance, if you are feeling jealous, it does not necessarily mean your partner is unfaithful. If you are feeling angry, it is not necessarily the other person's fault.

What else?

- ◆ The responsibility to allow others to express their feelings and opinions.
- ◆ The responsibility to explain yourself if you want to be understood.
- ◆ The responsibility to ask for something if you want to get it.

Any more?

- The responsibility to work for something if you want to get it.
- For example, it is not your therapist's or partner's job to "make" you better. You need to work at it.
- The responsibility to obey laws or work to change them or accept the consequences of breaking them.

Any others?

- The responsibility to grant others the same rights you want for yourself.
- The responsibility for determining your own behavior.
- Those are the basics.

It seems like most of this is about each person setting limits

- ◆ Yes, that's right. Limits are about prioritizing and balancing the wants, needs and demands each of you has.
- ◆ Again, keep the big picture in mind. Not everything you want is equally important to set limits about.
- ◆ Sometimes you need to make a decision about ending or changing the relationship.
